Mixing Potatoes

We met with a farmer last week, whom we know to be very successful in his agricultural operations, but who has some notions of his own about farming. Among other things, he said that he always gets a better crop of potatoes when he mixes together several kinds. He says that if you take the several kinds and plant them separately on the same piece, and then plant another similar thought it at first only a whim, but as for Portsmouth every night. he always has good crops we did not like to let him off without an investigation. What think you, brothers? Regular Gallipolis, Pome- NO OTHER MACHINE IN THE WORLD -Maine Farmer.

We think that man is a very sensible farmer. We know the theory is orthodox, not only as it regards potatoes, but stock-nest cattle, sheep, and swine. Scientific agriculturists are unwilling to admit that R. S. LALLANCE, they expressed a conviction that potatoes, do mix when growing in close will hybridize as well as Indian corn, or wheat, unless the buds are removed before the blossoms unfold. We LADIES & GENTLEMEN. have seen it tested and tried it ourselves for more than twenty years, and all the scientific reasoners can-not induce us to disbelleve what our Dry Goods, eyes have seen and our hands handled for many successive years. Red potatoes and white ones, when planted together, will as assuredly produce ring streaked, spedicled and spotted potatoes, as white corn and red will mingle if planted side by side, - V.

BREAMING HEIRERS .- In breaking young cows to the pail, kindness is important, and in fact an essential virtue. Make her love rather than fear or hate you. They are susceptible of these passions, and abuse will probably engender in them the exhibition of revenge also; treat then their inexperience and waywardness with soothing gentleness, and as like begets like, they will become kind and gentle towards us. We never know a cow to be cured of kicking propensities by abusive beatings.

Mrs. Eli Walker of Hartford, who Mrs. Eli Walker of Hartford, who has become heir to a fortune of $25,000,000 in Europe, is the wife of a machinist and the mother of several children. The family will leave for England next week, to assume possession of the property, and it is rumored that they will subsequently, return to Hartford and erect a palatial residence in that city. The property was originally bequeathed to Mrs. Walker's father, and as he to Mrs. Walker's father, and as he was dead, the whole amount came to her as his only child.
